GLOSSARY

Bologna Process (Bologna Process) is a series of inter-ministerial meetings and agreements between European countries designed to ensure comparability of standards and quality of higher education qualifications. Through the Bologna Agreements, the process has created the European Higher Education Area, in particular under the Lisbon Convention. It is named after the place where it was proposed, the University of Bologna, with the signing of the Bologna Declaration by the Ministers of Education of 29 European countries in 1999, creating a part of European integration.

The Accreditation Process is the assessment of quality in public and private institutions of higher education. Through the accreditation process, it supports the development of quality in these institutions, in order the institution of higher education to meet the acceptable quality criteria.

European Credit Transfer System (ECTS – Europäisches System zur Übertragung und Akkumulierung von Leistungspunkten) is a standard for comparing the achievements in studies and the performance of higher education students in the European Union and other European countries that cooperate in this field. One academic year corresponds to 60 ECTS-credits that are equivalent to 1500-1800 hours of study in all countries regardless of the qualification standard and is used to facilitate transfer and advancement through entire European Union.

European Qualifications Framework, EQF (Europäische

Qualifikationsrahmen für lebenslanges Lernen EQR) The qualifications framework classifies qualifications according to a series of criteria for specified levels of learning and achievement. It aims to integrate and coordinate qualifications, as well as improve the transparency, accessibility and quality of qualifications in relation to the labor market, the education and training system, as well as civil society. Qualifications frameworks support lifelong learning (that is, all learning activities that take place throughout life), with the aim of improving knowledge, skills and competences within a personal, civil, social and/or employment-related perspective. This definition covers the full range of formal, non-formal and informal learning.

Tuning project (Tuning-Projekt)
Since 2001, the Tuning project has been supported within the framework of SOCRATES, ERASMUS programs by the European Commission. It is a project for the harmonization of educational structures in Europe initiated by universities, which aims to offer a concrete approach to the implementation of the Bologna Process at the level of higher education institutions and subject areas.

Europian Higher Education Area – EHEA (Europäischer Hochschulraum EHR) started as a joint initiative of the anniversary of the "Bologna Process", in March 2010, during the Budapest-Vienna Ministerial Conference. As the main objective of the Bologna Process since its inception in 1999, the EHEA was intended to ensure comparable, compatible and coherent higher education systems in Europe.

Between the years 1999 - 2010, all the efforts of the members of the Bologna Process were focused on the European Higher Education Area, which became a reality with the March Declaration of 2010 in Budapest - Vienna.
